My son and I took a three-block walk to Chai Shai on a chilly Sunday afternoon. The restaurant anchors the east end of the little commercial strip center; Morningside Place at 651 E. 59th St., in Kansas City's Brookside Neighborhood. We nestled into a comfortable interior of deep, rich Burnt Sienna-"ish" colored walls to enjoy some of the best comfort food I've had...ever. Alex had Vegetable Samosas consisting of Chai Shai's signature spiced potatoes, peas and cilantro snuggled into two pastries and lightly fired to perfection.

Dinner-sized meals are served all day on weekends. I had Lamb Daal; cubes of lamb in tangy crushed tomato base combined with split yellow lentils, brown onions and clove all laying on a bed a fragrant basmati rice. The meal is served with raitha, naan and a delightful salad. I was taken back by the huge serving. First bite – WOW!!! Each bite after was better than the last. I felt like I could stay here and eat all day. Simple and very good!

I'm a proponent of patronizing locally owned businesses. Supporting this establishment or one of the many other Kansas City owned and operated businesses, is a great way to boost our local economy.
